- The treatment of infrastructure corporates are an important topic, since corporate form infrastructure investments represent four times the value of project finance form transactions (Moody's, in 2012-14). - We recommend the extend the same capital treatment for infrastructure projects to infrastructure corporates. - For infrastructure corporates to fulfill the definition and qualifying criteria, but that do, based on data, exhibit lower risk than other corporates, the WG believes that EIOPA's analysis on the wide infrastructure spectrum would support follow-up work on their recalibration response, we have provided EIOPA with significant new data of debt and equity corporate infrastructure transactions that could be used to complement EIOPA's analysis. - With regards to the definition of an infrastructure corporate, the WG strongly believes that "vast" should be replaced by "substantial" in the context of the percentage of underlying corporate cash flows that must be derived from owning, financing, developing or operating infrastructure assets. - Finally, the WG supports Target 2 in terms of security package, which is consistent with market practices in many jurisdictions, given differences in legal frameworks applicable to security, and the relevant costs and benefits.

BNY Mellon is a global custodian bank as well as a G-SIB. They are different than most banks by providing services which allow the capital markets to operate more efficiently while maintaining financial stability. As such they are very interested in the assessments of international bodies like the ESRB and they are deeply involved in the development of the Capital Markets Union. The impact of post trade aspects of the organization of financial markets is often underestimated. Ross is a very engaging speaker on some of the efficient collateral solutions that BNY Mellon has to offer, which could be interesting for you to be aware of from a macro perspective. Smart solutions can help achieve objectives of legislators while still allowing for the most efficient allocation of capital.

The EAPB is strongly supporting the creation of a Capital Markets Union (CMU) and therefore, also very interested in ongoing efforts to incentivize investments of insurance companies into certain asset classes. In this context, we would point out that there might be some inconsistencies in the current capital framework of the Solvency II-Directive which should be tackled. To be specific, we think that certain exposures to public banks are put at a disadvantage by being assigned with risk weights which in our view don't correspond with the actual risk. As promotional banks play an important role in the financing of the economy and thus, also in the context of the CMU, we would suggest certain amendments of the current framework.

Mon objectif est de chercher à expliquer comment les pays tiers parviennent à résister et exploiter les phénomènes d'européanisation. Mon travail se concentre plus spécifiquement sur la régulation financière liée à MiFID II et à EMIR en cherchant à déterminer dans quelle mesure un pays tiers peut façonner les régimes d'équivalence lui permettant d'obtenir un accès limité au marché européen.
